Borderless – Peace begins where walls tumble

There are boundaries – everywhere. They run between people, between properties, between states, between religions, between us. But they haven't always been there. How can we understand that boundaries are man-made? How can we overcome these boundaries in small ways and contribute to peaceful coexistence? And which boundaries do we even need so that we can develop freely?

One joint week with the Don Camillo community in Montmirail (CH):
living, working, and reflecting together.

With exciting encounters, discussions on non-violence and national borders, a visit to the House of Religions in Bern – and time to breathe in the Swiss countryside.
